"Catch your dreams before they slip away."

If we are to ever catch our dreams before they slip away we must first be able to recognize them first. Life can be lived in a multitude of ways, but it is best suited for any individual when they choose to live as much as their life as they can, as their own very selves. Over time we encounter influences from society that help to shape our brains, our thought patterns, our goals, and our ultimate desires and dreams.

It takes a unique mind to notice this, and a brave mind to act outside of these influences, so that the world may actually see who they really are. These courageously unique souls are souls of the people who effectively bring change to this world.

So, are you in reach of your dreams as of yet, and if not are you able to see them so that you may grab them? Are you allowing yourself to think and act freely from the judgment of others, and are you making great efforts to become the person you know you really are deep down?

Catch your dreams. Never let them slip away.
