"If you really want to succeed in life, then stop wishing and start doing."

If we ever want to get started on the route to becoming the person we are at heart, and if we ever want to be face to face with the dreams that started by blossoming in our creative minds, we have to be willing to just "do."

For many people, choosing to start is one of the most difficult steps in the journey of becoming the best person that they may possibly become. Taking that first step into a world that you don't know about completely causes many people to be scared of the chance that they may fail. Many of us choose to be comfortable in a life with no progress, and no risk taking, because we feel as though we are invincible because we feel safe.

Instead of being a ship that never explores, never adds character or experience, and just stays docked on the harbor, we have to be the ship that everyone looks to to go places in life, the ship that experiences the world, and the ship with a tremendous amount of character because of this fact.

Quit talking, and begin doing!
