"Every day may not be good... but there is something good in every day."
In order to make the best out of things we have to be willing to fight for our best life in each day. We must be willing to give ourselves the best chance at greatness possible, and this can only be done if our vices have a minimal effect on our lives. There will always be things in our life that need to be conquered, as no one is perfect, but we should never let these things conquer us because if they do, you will not be the best you can be.

We must also be willing to keep as much peace with the people around us as possible. Not only should we keep peace, but a lot of times we will have to be an example of how a person is really strong because they never let anyone take their peace from them.

Doing these things on a continuous basis will help to make us the best people that we may possibly become by our life's end.
