Think for yourself. Trust your own intuition. Another's mind isn't walking your journey, you are.
“Think for yourself. Trust your own intuition. Another's mind isn't walking your journey, you are.”

As humans, one thing that is great about our society is that we all have something to learn from one another. Though this is a great way to learn, some people get so comfortable with what everyone else's voice says, that they forget about their own. You have your own body, your own mind, and your own free will for a reason. If you choose not to make good use of who you are as an individual no one is liable to be held accountable for this besides yourself.

Today is the day to stop misplacing the blame on everyone else for not being who you want to be, and for not thinking the way that you want to think. Though some people are more limited in their freedom than others may be we still have a few choices that we must make on a daily basis. Are you going to live as yourself, and think for yourself, or do you choose to live as someone that you aren't, thinking only on what others want you to think?!
