"There will be obstacles. There will be doubters. There will be mistakes. But with hard work, there are no limits."

Greatness and success don't just come without any application of hard work, plain and simple. It is great to dream, and to hope for better in your life, but until you are willing to give your all to something, greatness will not be able to arrive.
In society it is ideal for someone to work hard at a job from 9 to 5, and eventually be given a position that justifies their stability and dependability instead of how hard they will actually work.

It is important to be dependable, but it is most important that we are willing to dream big dreams, dreams that may scare us, and work hard at fulfilling these huge dreams that scare us.

Without hard work, we still may be able to grow, but to become most polished, we have to desire and will ourselves to only work harder every day.
