If you're like many of the Kilachand Honors Learners, extra information is probably still wanted by you. Here's Professor Charles Dellheim, Representative of the Respects School, conveying how Kilachand Honors College students standout from pupils in a conventional honors system:
'What are we looking for? We're searching for people who are intellectually curious, inspired; they might have a rigorous interest in the matters. There are of our pupils plenty performing a variety of things that are various. I'll inform you what we don't want: If you are an English key, or perhaps a chemist, or possibly a violinist, and all you really want to do is Language or chemistry or cello; should you don't want to learn about different procedures as well as other methods for looking at the world, you'd be really unhappy while in the Kilachand Respects School, since that's not our objective. We provide persons lots of chances, specifically inside the second-year, to follow their very own pursuits; in fact, we need them to do that. What we wish are individuals who will be participating unique practices, with distinct suggestions, different ways, other ways of considering the planet. And also those who will love being in a residential area that is comprised of individuals from all around the University.
