Well, there are various sporting events involved in the triathlon. You need to plan on how to prepare for every one of them. You also have to plan in "bricks", or days when you train on 2 of these sporting events that you will be transitioning between in the actual triathlon. So, you have to plan on days where you do swimming, then Cycling. You plan on days where you bike, then run. You have to be fully appareled for every practice your on those days, as well. Do you like you are performing in the actual race.

Exercise. Ladies, firstly let's talk about it. If you use resistance (weight) training, which is recommended, as part of your routine, you will not end up as a muscle monster. It takes a completely different type and extremely strict weight training to amass huge muscles. Just ask most of the gym jocks how hard it is to get big muscles, naturally, without help of 'substance' aid.
