Well, there are various sporting events involved in a triathlon. You need to plan how to prepare for every of them. You as well have to plan in "bricks", or days when you train on 2 of these various sporting events that you will be transitioning between in an actual triathlon. So, you have to plan on days where you do swimming, then Cycling. You plan on days where you bike, then run. You have to be fully appareled for every practical sport on those days, as well. Do you like you are performing in an actual race.

Exercise. Ladies, firstly let me state that if you use resistance (weight) training, which is recommended as part of your routine, you will not end up as some muscle monster. It takes a completely different type and extreme style of weight training to amass huge muscles. Just ask most of the gym jocks how hard it is to get big muscles, naturally, without help of 'substance' aid.
